

How to successfully manage cancer at work

Every two minutes someone is diagnosed with cancer and we can expect the incidence of cancer in the workplace to increase. It's essential that organisations equip their managers with the relevant knowledge, skills and confidence so they are ready to respond. This half day, interactive and practical, workshop is designed for HR and occupational health professionals, line managers and team leaders.

Attending this workshop will enable you to:

- Make a huge difference to an employee's wellbeing and rehabilitation
- Provide full support to employees as they adjust to returning to work after cancer
- Handle communications and difficult conversations with empathy
- Understand legal requirements and avoid the risk of expensive and time consuming legal claims and reputational damage
- Develop a strategy and action plan for dealing effectively with cancer in your organisation
- Take advantage of a free 30 minute one to one follow up phone session to discuss individual needs

Facilitated by Barbara Wilson and Maggie Newton – Working With Cancer

Barbara is a senior HR professional with almost 40 years' experience and founded Working With Cancer in 2013. Maggie has many years experience of building and coaching teams. Both have had personal experience of cancer and are passionate about and experienced with helping others to return to work successfully.

Wednesday 7th February 2018, 9.30am – 1pm

Shelter, 4 Garrett Street, London, EC1Y 0TY

£250 or £175 for charities/social enterprises

Early bird rate of £225 applies if booked by 31st December 2017

Further information and bookings: admin@workingwithcancer.co.uk 07910835585

Note: Book early as places are limited. See our website for full terms and conditions.